New York Post; Attention has aiready been called in the Post to the general tendency of newspapers and field correspondents, in the present war with Spain, to pass over the gallant services Spain, to pass over the gamant services of the United States regulars with but scant recognition, in their eagerness to do full justice to the exploits of the volunteers. Similar criticism, probably with equal cause, has been made of the war correspondents in our great civil strife; but the Townsend Civil War illustrates to the content of the conten y at Columbia University contains rials for a fitting record of the ed States army in the conflict for Union prary at Commine tensient constants materials for a fitting record of the United States army in the conflict for the Union.

One of the proudest episodes in the history of the regular army to be found here is the exhibition of fidelity by the mon-commissioned officers and privates, who, treacherousis; made privates, who, treacherousis; made privates, who, treacherousis; made privates, every tempission to modate their oaths and desert, their fag. Offered commissions in the Confederate service, with money and land fiely tendered, to them, they all scornes such inducements, submitted to serges hardship, and, when at last exchanged, avenged themselves on the field of battle for the marvalling insults to their integrity. Too few in numbers to act as an independent force, the regular regiments work part in every great battle of the war fought in the east and in most of those west of the Alleghenics. Their losses included 1,355 officers and men killed in action, and $50 more died of their wounds, making an aggregate of 2,355. In addition, the deaths from discusse were over 3,060, Their severe losses proved that they were in the release to the fight, and the tentimony of their commanders shows with what heroism they uphed the Union cause. The vigorous charges of the regulars often won the day, and in defeat they more than once saved the Federal army from much great's disaster by the obsinacy with which they resisted superior numbers.

from much greatly disaster by the obsilinacy with which they resisted superior numbers.

At the first battle of Butt Run they covered the retreat of the fugitive troops from that field to Centreville. Their services in McCletian's campaign on the Peninsuia are matters for proud recollection. During the slege of Yorktown the regulars did their part in building breastworks, later to leave them and follow Magruder up the Peninsuia until they found themselves in the swamps of the Chickahominy. The famous Six Hundred at Bahaklava did not behave more gallantly than did the Fifth cavalry under Captain Whitney, when, from the left of the line at Gaines's Mills five companies charged into the advancing Confederate host, an entire division of which was about to charge the Federal artiflery, and would have captured the batteries if its onset had not been stayed by the Fifth. At the close of the battle it was left for the regulars to be the last troops to cross the Chickahominy, covering as they did the retreat of the Fifth corps to the south side of the river. At Gaines's Mills the Eleventh Infantry, now in Porto Rico, was said to have suffered more than any other resiment in the field. The Twelfth infantry, which fought at Santiago, also suffered verr, werely, and a battaffon, alone, of the ourteenth lost 147 men, killed and woulded. This hast named regiment is with General Merritt in Manila.

this engagement, and it was incurred in twenty minutes. Out of thirty-two officers in the action thirteen were wounded, four of them mortally. Major Frederick Townsend and Adjutant Frederick Fhisterer (now assistant adjutant general of the state of New York) remained on their horses during the battle and acquitted themselves with distinction. The Eighteenth lost during the war 144 men killed sixty-one more who died of wounds, 53 others wounded, and 206 missing. This was a greater loss than was sustained by any other regiment of the regular army. July, 1863, is a morth noteworthy for the fall of Vicksburg and the battle of Gettysburg. The colors of the Thirteenth infantry were the first regimental fins planted or the defensive works of Vicksburg and Gettysburg. In three days fighting the regulars, out if 2.044 men, lost 1,000 killed and wounded, which was by far the heaviest loss, proportionately, suffered by any body of men on that field. The Tenth infantry was one of twelve regiments that sustained the highest percentage of loss in a single battle. This was incurred at Gettysburg, the loss being twenty-three per cent. On the second day of this great contest the regulars stemmed the tide of battle, and held the almost victorious Confederates at bay, in and amount the Devil's Den, until Little Round Top was occupied by Union troops.

The strength of the Second brigade on the morning of July 2 was eighty officers and $25 men. Of these, Thirty-nine officers and $25 men. Of these, Thirty-nine officers and 409 men were either killed or wounded. In the First brigade, out of about 1,000 men, fourteen officers and $41 enlisted men were among the killed, wounded and missing, and these figures were increased by the casualties of the night and the following day. Captain Frederick Fuger, of the Fourth artiflery, after other officers of his battery, had been killed or wounded in Pickett's charge, fought his remaining gun untill ordered to withdraw; and for this conduct he received a medial of honor. He is still in the active list. Battery M of the same regiment is seid to have lost more men in the war than any other hattery, either regular or volunteer. The Second infantry covered tiself with gory at Gettysburg, losing half of its sumber in killed and wounded. The strength of the Second brigade on

The brave men who charged here with Colonel Starr. July 4, 1893, incurred a frightful loss. Captain William P. Saunders, of this regiment, was the only army officer from the state of Mississippi who remained foral to the flag.

On May 5, 1894, began the battles of the Wilderness, in which the regulars, commanded by Generals Griffin and Ayres, took part on the 5th, 7th, 10th and 12th. During this campaign of General Grant, the Twelfth infantry was among the regiments that suffered most severely. Out of some sixteen or eighteen officers who broke camp with the Twelfth or April 30, only two were remaining two months later. The First cavakry, now coming to Montauk Point. In this campaign lost in killed and wounded thirteen officers out of nine-teen and 133 men out of 315. This record seems a sufficient answer to the slighting question often asked in the civil war, "Did you ever see a dead cavakryman!"

The most daring act in the war by any battery is said, by Confederate testimony, to have been that of Battery D. Fifth artillery, at Spotsylvanis. At the slege of Petersburg the regulars were active in the trements, and beat the enemy haddy in a brush at the Globe Tavern on August 18. The regulars were aften of the most dash and captured the colors of the Eleventh Infantry, captain Thleman, of the Twelfth infantry, jumped on the breastworks, sword in hand, and knocking down the soldier who had secured the colors, receptured them and waved them defantly over the works.

the brigade of regulars stood like a stone wall, but, owing to the capture of a staff officer, who was on his way to stone wath but, owing to the capture of a staff officer, who was on his way to order it to a different point, a large number were taken prisoners. The Nineteenth infantry was nearly wheel out of existence, and every man beft in it was finally captured. During the Atlanta campaign the brigade of regulars under veneral King particularly distinguished itseff. At a critical moment Captain Stetson, at the head of his company of the Fifteenth infantry, displayed conspicuous valor. In the advance from Marietta to the Chattahoochee one company of the Fifteenth lost forty men, and in the seventy-five days campaign the brigade lost as a prisoner only one man, who was wounded and captured at Kenesaw. Among the vasuable officers of the Fifteenth who sacrificed their lives in this campaign. Engle. and lost ext guns, but recovered them all.

A brigade of regulars, composed of the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth infantry, has a great history in connection with the baitle of fione River, or Murfreesboro, fought December 31, 1862. No other brigade in the army lost so many officers and men killed and wounded in the course of the war as thiz. Its first exploit was at flone River, under Colonel Sheppard, where it bore the brunt of the battle of the battle fell heaviest on this brigade, and, standing as it did as firm as Gibraltar, it fairly mowed down the advancing enemy, so steady was its fire, and beyond question, its discipline.

The Eighteenth Infantry, called the "crack" regiment of the regular army, suffered the heaviest regimental loss in this engagement, and it was incurred in twenty minutes. Out of thirty-two officers in the action thirteen were wounded, four of them mortally. Major Frederick Townsend and Adjutant Frederick Finisterer (now assistant adjutant general of the state of New York) remained on their horses during the battle and acquitted themselves with distinction. TO HONOR SAMPSON'S FLEET.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 15 .The navy department is considering the project of a naval review in New York hartor on next Saturday, when the battleships and cruisers under Admiral Heships and cruisers under Admiral Sampson arrive there. Efforts have been made to induce the department to have a review of the ships and a land review of the saliors. It is probable that the final decision will be to have the war vessel go up the river to Grant's tomb at Riverside and there fire a saliute, the trip up to the tomb affording the public a sufficient opportunity to view the ships without tiring the sallors by a land procession.

Upward of 150 cases had been treated at the various hospitals before 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A number of policemen were overcome. The surgeons found that their prostration was due to swelling of the legs and feet productive of the heat from the asphalt and wood paving on which they stood.

There was an occasional halt in the upward tendency when the price of some leading stock was advanced to a level which invited unusually heavy offerings. But no volume of offerings seemed sufficient to check the ateady upward tendency of the market and everything was absorbed with eagerness. The St. Paul took the lead of the market with a rise of 3½ percent, and total transactions for to-day footing up 67,000 shares. This advance was undoubtedly due to the movement of a large combination of speculative interests and was based primarily on the fact that the advance in the price hitherto has been in commensurate with that in the other grangers. The reason for this probably was that the stock has been more largely held abroad than the other grangers and London has been persistently liquidating its holdings of American stocks. Englands unfavorable trade balance and the strong market presented in New York for profit taking of course have been the motives for this selling. But it was nevertheless effective in holdings back the price of St. Paul. It is now said that these London offerings have been steadily absorbed by the powerful speculative cilque which started the present build movement in Burlington and which has now shifted the leadership of St. Paul. The buying was accompanied by rumors that the next semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent will be supplemented by an extra dividend. The preferred stock was bid up 3½ per cent to-day and the high grade bonds of the company were also strong. But while St. Paul was the conspicuous centre of the market the other grangers were uniformly strong. The buying of Northern Pacific continued very large and aggressive. Brooklyn Rapid Transit was also heavily bought and a number of other, industrials, notably Tobacco, some of the fron and steel companies, New York Air Brake, the Rubber stock and of business activity in all lines strengthen the conviction in the country's continued prosperity.

Business in bonds was on a somewhat reduced scale and there was a tendency to reaction at some points in the list, probably due to the diversion of capital into stocks. Total sales, $658,000.

Gevernment bonds were otherwise unchanged.

The total sales of stocks to-day were 558,500 shares.
